JCM AMERICAN NAMES DOUG EDWARDS AS VICE PRESIDENT OF DEVELOPMENT

LAS VEGAS – JCM American has named Doug Edwards Vice President of Development. In his new position, Edwards will oversee JCM's New Business Development and Engineering departments.

Prior to moving to JCM, Edwards was Director of Technology Development with AllEndeavors Technology Consultants, where he generated growth and business strategies for new inventions and products while expanding market opportunities. He began his career with Raytheon Engineers and Constructors as a Project Engineering Manager. Edwards holds a B.S. Degree in Mechanical Engineering from Drexel University.

JCM President Aki Isoi said, "This is an exciting period of growth and progress at JCM. Bringing Doug to the JCM team at a vice president level sends a clear message that JCM is very serious about exploring new business opportunities and further developing our engineering department. We began this growth period by bringing Mark Hutchinson aboard as Director of Public Gaming and International Sales, and we expect to see additional appointments in the very near future, as we continue to position the company for a strong growth period."
